Good morning students

In ancient days, the world was green and wonderful. Then Kijiamuh Ka'ong, the Creator, created Snow Spirit. Snow covered all the land, burying the animals in their caves and dens. One day, the animals decided to go to the Creator and requested him to make the world warm again. It was decided that Rainbow Crow was the most beautiful of all the birds would go and requested to the Creator for help. At last he reached Heaven. Rainbow Crow called out to the Creator but the Creator was too busy to hear. So Rainbow Crow sang his most beautiful song and got the attention of the Creator. The Creator offered him a gift but in return, he asked for something that could bring warmth to the world. Then the Creator created the Sun and gave it to Rainbow Crow. When he flew back to the earth, his feathers caught fire by the sun. His feathers were covered in black soot from the smoky fire. The smoke from it, made him cough. When finally Rainbow Crow landed on the earth, his lovely feathers were as black as coal and his voice was not as sweet as it was. Everyone was happy except Rainbow Crow. He complained to the Creator. But the Creator told him that he was blessed by him. Every creature on the earth would honour him for his sacrifice and man would not hunt him and put him in his cage. By the time, his feathers became shiny and inside each feather there glimmered all the colours of the rainbow.
