Once there was an old woman who baked good cakes to sell. From morning till night her little house was filled with wonderful smells. She used to make different kinds of cakes. All over the town, everyone ordered cakes from Granny Blake. She never said no to anyone. She never got time for herself. She never took any rest. She loving baking cakes. Then everyone decided to celebrate her birthday. So they ordered a cake for the whole town. Granny agreed to the order. But she was still thinking how she could measure such a great cake and how she would mix it, beat it and bake it.

She was still amazed where to put the cake when it would be done. Everybody in the town helped Granny to measure the ingredients of the cake. All the boys and girls brought their pails for the measuring. Then the new neighbours brought a big cement mixer to help with all the mixing and the beating. Afterwards, each bride popped a different panful of batter into her own oven. The good smells started rising all over the town. As soon as the cakes were baked, the town band fitted them all together on the band-stand right in the middle of the park. When everything was done, the cake was ready then Granny asked what she wrote on the cake with her decorating tube. Everybody sang the song HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO YOU. Granny Blake just smiled. When the candles were lighted, she blew them out, all in one puff. The town band started playing too. They played for a whole week. Because that was exactly how long it took Granny Blake to see everybody and to help eat up her wonderful cake.
