Summary of the chapter

There was a gentle giant named Bulky who was very polite to the local villagers. Still the villagers always complained to Bulky. For instance, his shoes seemed like boats to the villagers. Even if he tiptoed past their homes, he still made the ground tremble. One day, they decided life would be much more comfortable without a giant living on their doorstep. So they sent for Spellbound, the wizard and asked him if he could shrink Bulky down to normal human size. Bulky agreed to the plan at once. He started living his life with a kind family. A new giant named Heavyhand entered the village. He was short-tempered and always wanted to get his own way. He started troubling the villagers. Soon they realised their mistake. They wished Bulky to be giant again so that they would be saved from Heavyhand. Now they called Spellbound again to make Bulky the giant again. As Heavyhand lay snoring in the shade, he felt something tickle his nose. It didn't stop until, snuffling and snorting, he opened his eyes. It was Bulky. Heavyhand started running after him. Bulky didn't try to hide, but waited till Heavyhand had seen him before disappearing inside. He stepped out of the cave and blocked the mouth of the cave with a rock. The mountain trembled as Heavyhand raged and cursed, as he began to dig himself out. Spellbound was also ready. Spellbound turned Bulky the giant again. Heavyhand took off nervously across the mountains without looking back. Villagers decided not to complain again.
