Eric along with his parents and sister Brittney, planned to go to his grandparents' house on Christmas Eve. They reached the house. Eric asked his grandmother about his grandfather. Grandma told Eric that Grandpa was in the farm. Grandma told Eric to go and tell him to hurry with the tasks. Eric asked Grandpa whether the animals talked on Christmas eve. Grandpa was amazed to hear his question and asked him where he had got such an idea. Eric replied that his sister read him a story where animals could talk on Christmas Eve. Grandpa suggested him to go in the barn and try to listen himself by the time he would finish his work. Eric stepped into the barn. He asked the cow whether it could talk that night. The cow crunched a mouthful of hay. Eric heard a soft deep sound inside her throat. Similarly, Bertie, the horse tickled Eric's ear with his rubbery mouth. A grey kitten rubbed against Eric's jeans. He picked her up and held her close to his cheek. Eric heard a soft crackling sound and crunchings. The sounds wrapped around him like a warm, woolly scarf. But he didn't hear any talking. Then Grandpa made Eric understand that everything was not said with words. When they went home, Eric saw through the window that Dad was piling gifts under the tree. His mother and Brittney helping Grandma with the chicken soup in the kitchen. Even though he couldn't hear a word, but their actions were saying that they loved him.
